How About a Photo Tour of my Last Month

The bus ride to Annual Conference, was still not fun. More road torn up for construction than not, so a slow, bumpy process.

But it was great to enjoy the same great resort as last year. Only a couple clearer days, but great setting, food, and fellowship.

A few extra days to rest and spoil myself a bit.

Special worship was conducted outside my house in the city, as the landlords celebrated their only son's marriage after him not being home for 6 years. I wasn't disappointed to miss the bigger wedding party that was also held while I was gone.

After many years, the chance to return to visit in Rukum, where we started a clinic and the first Body in the area. Many huge changes in both after these years. So nice to meet people long unseen, and meet new ones as well.

Many sweet times of fellowship together and sharing in different ways.

Multiplication has happened, and we continue to look for more.

The traveling on further west and in the southern tropical plains. With a chance to teach a body there, and visit and catch up on a family continuing to seek to serve in another new area, despite meaning a very simple and hard life.

Some girls shared a dance, with traditional dress and style, done to a like-minded song. Click on picture for the video.

I am now safely back in the Far West as the country celebrates its second biggest holiday of Diwali (Tihar). My research survey in the village is scheduled for the weekend after US Thanksgiving. We are working on coordination and preparation for this. We will need good health, the help of other workers in the village, and logistics to pull everything together. My partner, by the way, had lots of health check ups, but not a lot of concrete help for his issues. He needs to work on a lot of life-style issues that hopefully will help.
